Comprehension:

Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions:

The rule of the road means that in order that the liberties of all may be preserved, the liberties of everybody must be curtailed. When the policemen, say, at a road-crossing steps into the middle of the road and puts out his hand, he is the symbol not of tyranny but of liberty. You have submitted to a curtailment of private liberty in order that you may enjoy a social order which makes your liberty a reality. We have both liberties to preserve- our individual liberty and our social liberty. That is, we must have a judicious mixture of both. I shall not permit any authority to say that my child must go to this school or that, shall specialise in science or arts. These things are personal. But if I say that my child shall have no education at all, then society will firmly tell me that my child must have education whether I like it or not.

Comprehension:

Read the following passage and answer the question:

Reality television has always been a significant part and popular form of the entertainment landscape. With low production costs and a broad appeal, reality TV has shifted from the fringes to the center of television culture. It has become a staple for contemporary programming, as it attracts diverse audiences while being easily marketed for foreign distribution. Despite its popularity, reality television faces criticism, often being labelled as “trash television”. When thinking of reality television, you might recall popular shows like “American Idol” or “Survivor”. Critics have pointed out that many shows are often scripted and edited to create specific narratives. Thus, “reality” in reality television can be seen as a social construction that transforms everyday experiences into consumable entertainment. Some scholars suggest that its influence is minimal, aligning with the limited effects model, where viewers select shows that affirm their existing beliefs. Conversely, uses and gratifications model posits that different viewers watch reality TV for various needs, primarily for entertainment, but often reinforcing established perceptions rather than challenging them.

Read the following passage and answer the question:

Reality television has always been a significant part and popular form of the entertainment landscape. With low production costs and a broad appeal, reality TV has shifted from the fringes to the center of television culture. It has become a staple for contemporary programming, as it attracts diverse audiences while being easily marketed for foreign distribution. Despite its popularity, reality television faces criticism, often being labelled as “trash television”. When thinking of reality television, you might recall popular shows like “American Idol” or “Survivor”. Critics have pointed out that many shows are often scripted and edited to create specific narratives. Thus, “reality” in reality television can be seen as a social construction that transforms everyday experiences into consumable entertainment. Some scholars suggest that its influence is minimal, aligning with the limited effects model, where viewers select shows that affirm their existing beliefs. Conversely, uses and gratifications model posits that different viewers watch reality TV for various needs, primarily for entertainment, but often reinforcing established perceptions rather than challenging them.

Read the following passage and answer the question:

It is important to recognize and to celebrate the wide range of cultures that exist. Of late differences of opinion has cropped concerning multiculturalism. The multiculturalists argue that we must recognize cultural differences that are legitimately linked to language and religion. In multiculturalism, minority groups see opportunities to play a part in moulding the national culture even as they are molded by it. Campus multiculturalism, variations among students, have tried with some success to talk about how a racially and ethnically diverse student body can enrich everyone's education. For these multiculturalists, differences are absolute, irreducible, and intractable. The hardliners are not interested to allow Americans to belong to more than a single culture, to be both particularisms and Universalists. The time-honored India mixture of assimilation and traditional allegiance is denounced as a danger to racial and gender authenticity. The multiculturalists insist on seeing all perspectives as tainted by the perceiver's particular point of view. Impartial knowledge, they argue, is not possible, because ideas are simply the expression of individual identity that are linked to culture or a language.
