Q94. What should come in place of blank number [1]?

The passage given below is a paragraph. Read it carefully and choose the word from the options to complete the paragraph.

To speak of power is to speak of a system of signs, a system which sustains itself through the production of signs. Power is not produced through ideology alone — it is suspended within an endless circulation of signs, perpetually rehearsed and deferred. Visibility, far from being liberatory, becomes a trap: to be seen is to be entered into the ledger of recognition, to be rendered manageable. Governance, therefore, does not merely prohibit — it produces, emerging through the architecture of documentation, through the soft coercion of the category. The surveillance apparatus is not primarily optical but procedural; its power lies not in what it records, but in what it refuses to release from its grid. Dissent, where it survives, cannot take root in frontal resistance — it must inhabit [2] [_____] — the refusal to be parsed, the uncodifiable murmur that eludes the syntax of control. The body becomes, in this arrangement, a text perpetually under revision: marked, interpreted, overwritten. What justice can this system accommodate? Not the justice of restoration, but of severance. A justice that does not appeal to existing terms but dismantles them. What is sought is not repair, but [3] [_____] — the unmaking of the apparatus itself, the stripping away of every grammar of legibility. To commit to this is to renounce consolation, to step outside the reassurance of meaning altogether. One must hold open a space for a justice that perpetually withholds itself, that remains [4] [_____] — immeasurable, unanchored, beyond the coordinates of any existing framework. Only from within this exposure can we imagine a politics freed from the compulsion to represent, a subjectivity that refuses to be owned. What endures at the limit of all this is not a settled identity, but a [5] [_____] — something that persists precisely by evading capture, that exists in the caesura between recognition and erasure.

- (a) extinguishes
- (b) evacuates
- (c) reifies
- (d) dissimulates

Ans.(c)

Q95. What should come in the place of blank number [2]?

The passage given below has certain words missing. Go through it attentively and pick the most suitable word from the options to complete each blank:

To speak of power as a neutral mechanism is to already surrender to the logic of the institution: that which sustains itself through containment, and [1] [_____] through the ritual of classification. The governed subject is not produced through ideology alone — it is suspended within an endless circulation of signs, perpetually rehearsed and deferred. Visibility, far from being liberatory, becomes a trap: to be seen is to be entered into the ledger of recognition, to be rendered manageable. Governance, therefore, does not merely prohibit — it produces, emerging through the architecture of documentation, through the soft coercion of the category. Dissent, where it survives, cannot take root in frontal resistance — it must inhabit [2] [_____] — the refusal to be parsed, the uncodifiable resistance to control. The body of the subject is not primarily a site of control, but a site of perpetual negotiation. What choice can the justice of the apparatus itself, the apparatus that is sought is not repair, but the restoration, beyond the apparatus of legibility. To commit to this step outside the reassurance of the grid, beyond the coordinates of the grid, is to hold open a space for a future that is not owned, beyond the compulsion to represent, a subjectivity that endures at the limit of all this is not a settled identity, but a [3] [_____] — something that persists precisely by evading capture, that exists in the caesura between recognition and erasure.

- (a) conditional
- (b) algorithmic
- (c) asymbolic
- (d) aesthetic

To speak of power as a neutral mechanism is to already surrender to the logic of the institution: that which sustains itself through containment, and [1] [] through the ritual of classification. The governed subject is not produced through ideological compulsion, but through an endless circuit of representation, which is both deferred and deferred. Visibility, far from being a neutral mechanism, is a power: to be seen is to be governed, to be recognized, to be rendered material. The subject is not primarily a product of the institution, but a product of the institution through the architecture of power, which does not merely represent, but also enforces, through the not primarily optical but primarily political, what it represents, but in which it also enforces its grid. Dissent, where it survives, is not a neutral mechanism, but a product of the institution, which must be parsed, the uncodifiable murmur that eludes the syntax of control. The body becomes, in this arrangement, a text perpetually under revision: marked, interpreted, overwritten. What justice can this system accommodate? Not the justice of restoration, but of severance. A justice that does not appeal to existing terms but dismantles them.
